Doctors generally understand why long-term use of cocaine can cause nasal damage. Cocaine constricts blood vessels, which occurs as a result of the inhibition of reuptake of the neurotransmitters epinephrine and norepinephrine. It also causes chronic constriction of blood vessels that lead to atrophy of the mucosa and eventual necrosis (cell death).

Alcohol is more easily accessible than most other drugs. Even though it is the deadliest drug, alcohol is legal in the U.S. and Britain, as well as many other countries around the world. As we can see from this study and alcohol's far-reaching effects, legal substances cause just as much damage, or more, than illegal substances.
