The reality of living with OCD . Rachel, September 6, 2018. From a very young age, I knew there was something different about me. It seemed to me that everyone around me was separate and I was encased in my own bubble, my own world and it frustrated me to tears that I couldn't work out how to make that bubble pop. Soon, my bubble solidified.

The only way to live a stable, healthy, and fruitful life, is to live in reality. There are many ways by which we could live in fantasies and illusions that will set us up for certain disappointment and maybe worse. The fantasy that we are able to have or control whatever we wish is one. The illusion that we are entirely helpless is another.

Whether you agree or not, we all have been ignoring the harsh realities of life for quite some time. Even though we are technically advanced, we are traveling back when it comes to seeking the real meaning of life. We have no clue about what's going on with us and what our actual job on earth is.

8 Harsh Realities of Life You Need To Accept Right Away

What is going on here? The reality is that the pleasures of the world leave only emptiness, drugs destroy lives, and money in itself can never bring security. The list goes on and on. And the consequences are horrific. Our postmodern world is pulling each individual into a vacuum of self-centeredness, whispering, "It's all about you." It's all about your own pleasure, peace, prosperity, and comfort.
