June 12, 2020. By Matt Ellsworth. The Flinn Foundation stands with all who speak and work to defeat racism and violence in our nation, especially the scourge of systemic violence against the Black community. George Floyd's killing by police officers in Minneapolis, following so many tragedies like it before, has rightfully galvanized a movement for justice, a movement that today requires protest and nonviolent resistance.

It is the thought that one race is superior or inferior to another race. Racism is based on the belief that humans are separated in different races based on different appearances like skin color or social and moral traits, and culture like language, religion or place of birth. Racism does not understand an individual person by its individualism but puts it into a stereotype of one "race" and judges the person based on that stereotype.
